

Inside your tent home, the floor is just the ground. But the ground is usually tramped hard and smooth. If your father is able there may be carpets on at least parts of the floor.

Look around. You will not see anything that you would call furniture. But somewhere there are chairs and a table and bed. But they are different from those you have.

Chairs - You sit on a mat in your tent. This is woven of wool or camel's hair or straw. See the Research Card on MATS.

Beds - When you see the beds, they will probably be all folded and piled in a stack at the side of the tent.

Each bed is a mat long enough for each one to lie down on. It is probably made of lamb's wool or woven straw. At night you spread it on the floor.

Table—The table was only a straw mat or skin on which the food was placed. The family sat cross-legged around the table.
